Honor God In All We Do

January is Cervical Health Awareness Month - This article is from nccc-online.org website:

“Hologic - The Women’s Health Company’s “Promise to Me” Initiative Donates Cervical Cancer Screening Funds for Women in Need. Hologic will donate funds to support preventative screening for underinsured and uninsured women. In honor of National Cervical Health Awareness Month, Hologic is partnering with the National Cervical Cancer Coalition (NCCC) to fund cervical cancer screening for women in need. For every person that "makes the promise" and passes it on through the Promise to Me website, Hologic will donate $1 towards healthcare for women. "When women are educated about important health issues, like cervical cancer and HPV, they take action," said Sarina Araujo, the Executive Director of the NCCC. "To help battle issues related to health disparities, we are thrilled to partner with Hologic to bring cervical cancer screening to women that might not otherwise have access." "Most women who develop cervical cancer haven't been routinely screened," said Edward Evantash, M.D., Medical Director and Vice President of Medical Affairs at Hologic. "The Promise to Me initiative will help provide screening to those without access while also raising awareness about cervical cancer. Education about cervical cancer - and other women's health issues - is critical to improving the health and wellbeing of women." HPV is the most common sexually transmitted disease in the United States and is recognized as the leading cause of cervical cancer. About 80 percent of women in the United States will have an HPV infection in their lifetimes. While most of those infections will clear on their own, some will lead to cervical cancer. For this reason, routine cervical cancer screening, which may include Pap and HPV testing, has been effective in identifying this preventable disease early.”

There are many low cost/no cost clinics that offer annual exams, including Pap tests, regardless of income. Many of these organizations just ask for a small donation in lieu of payment. In fact, many doctors waive the office visit fee for uninsured women for a Pap test. Check with your local Planned Parenthood, health department, family practice, or OB/GYN for more information. You may also be able to get a free or low-cost Pap test through the National Breast and Cervical Cancer Early Detection Program. To find out if you qualify call 1-800-CDC-INFO.

If you have internet access you can go to www.promiseto.me and make the promise to take care of YOUR-SELF and help other women around the world do the same. And if you don’t have internet access please still make this promise to yourself because YOU deserve it!!

It’s a GREAT way to start out 2010!!

I promise to take care of me.

For myself and the people who love me.

I promise to take care of my health. When I am in good health, I am a strong woman. When I am strong I can help myself and the people around me. I deserve to put myself and my health before anything else. I will spread this message to all of the women in my life who need to take care of themselves.

This is my promise.

*An important note to the gentleman of ServiceMaster by Stratos—you have wives, daughters, mothers, girlfriends, aunts, sisters, etc who need this information. Help them all make this promise by passing this article on—it could be a life saver!!
